TO THE CITIZENS OF RENO.

I HAVE BEEN A RESIDENT OF YOUR town for five years, and outside of my own business have not seen a decent pair of boots that were made here.

In order, therefore, to extend to everyone facilities for obtaining really first-class boots and shoes, I have sent to San Francisco for two A. No. 1 mechanics, the best to be found in the first-class shop. This enlargement of my stock, and facilities for the heavy extra expense, and I look and trust, therefore, to Reno's citizens, and all the people generally desirous of obtaining the very best of workmanship, to aid me with their increased patronage.

First-class material, first-class workmen and first-class work, at living prices, is the motto of my new store, and is inscribed on the banner floating from my castle walls.

Respectfully,
H. F. PAVODA.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN.

There are many at the age of thirty to sixty, who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation, and a weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the urinary deposits aropy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, the color will be a thin milky hue, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. Dr. S. will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration to the genito-urinary organs.

Office hours—10 to 4 and 6 to 8. Sundays from 10 to 11 A. M. Consultation free. Thorough examination and advice, $5.

A SWEEPING REDUCTION.

The Executive order, promulgating changes made in the Internal Revenue collection districts, has been made public, and will take effect July 1st, or as soon thereafter as practicable. The number of districts is reduced from 126 to eighty-two. Nevada has been attached to the Fourth District of California, with A. L. Frost, of Sacramento, as Collector. Oregon and Washington Territory are joined, with John C. Cartwright, Oregon's Collector, as Collector of the new district. Utah, Idaho and Montana, are added together, with Utah's Collector, O. J. Hollister, as Collector of the district. Arizona and New Mexico are consolidated into one, and so are Colorado and Wyoming. Dakota has been attached to Nebraska. In California the First district has been added to the Fourth, Nevada's new place. These are the changes reported for the Pacific Coast. We have not seen any estimate of the saving effected by this reduction, but it will certainly amount to $250,000 per annum. The time will come when the entire Internal Revenue service will be done away with, and the recent reductions in and abolishment of taxes of this character, having lessened the necessity for as many officials as we have had, the President has lopped of the number deemed advisable without detriment to the efficiency of the present and future needs of the service.

The Last Spike on the Northern Pacific.

Active preparations are being made for driving the last spike of the Northern Pacific Railroad. The spike of gold has already been made, and it is now in the possession of President Villard. The place selected for its reception is about ten miles out from Helena. It was at first the intention of the company to restrict the number of invited guests to 100, but arrangements are now being made for 400 people. Quite a number of these will be from Europe. A special train will be made up in New York and run direct to the spot selected, stopping only at Chicago and St. Paul to take on invited guests. President Villard will give the spike the first blow. From the site selected the special train will go to the Pacific coast. The exact date has not yet been fixed, but it will probably be in the last week in August. There is a gap of about 120 miles between the ends of the track to close between Missoula and Helena, and work is being pushed ahead at a very rapid rate.

Congressman Wait will deliver the address of welcome at the Woodstock, Conn., Fourth of July celebration. The programme sets forth that there will be an address by Senator Platt of Connecticut; an address on "Natural Aids to Education," by Rutherford B. Hayes; a poem by the Rev. Leonard Woolsey Bacon; an address on "New England," by Senator Aldrich; an address on "National Progress," by Bishop Cox; a poem, "Our Country," by John G. Whittier; an address on "National Evils," by Senator Blair of New Hampshire; and an address on "Temperance," by John B. Gough.

A special from Washington states that the President said to a friend there was no truth in the report that he proposed to remove Commissioner of Internal Revenue Evans. He also said that he held Commissioner Evans responsible for the proper administration of his office, and certainly should not interfere when Commissioner Evans made changes in confidential positions immediately around himself.

The quarterly interest on the 4 per cent. bonds of the United States will be paid next Monday. The amount to be disbursed is over $7,000,000, the largest quarterly disbursement for public interest now made. Checks for register bonds of this series are now being prepared at Washington, and will be mailed at the close of the week.

John H. Alexander, the applicant from Ohio for admission to the West Point Academy, has passed his examination and has been admitted. Wonder if his ears will be clipped?

The Ohio Democrats are having trouble about their State and Executive Committees. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Balloting for United States Senator in New Hampshire is still progressing without any immediate prospect of an election.

The Ohio Supreme Court has decided that the Scott liquor-tax law is Constitutional.

It is a cold day when Mr. Frost gets left. May the Lord have pity on him.

REMINISCENCES OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S ADMINISTRATION.

How Slavery was Destroyed.

(By Hon. Schuyler Colfax.)

SECOND ARTICLE.

Mr. Lincoln had struck at slavery in his proclamation with the battle-axe of the war-power, the solemn steps towards which culmination were referred to in my recent article. But anti-slavery men, in Congress and among the people, were unwilling to allow this great act to be hazarded upon future judicial decisions as to the extent of the President's power in such a mighty crisis. It was an open secret then, that the great Senator from Massachusetts, Charles Sumner, believed that a Congressional act of emancipation could constitutionally be passed, and that there was a peril in risking success on the ratification of a constitutional amendment by three-quarters of all the States, Southern as well as Northern. In the consultations then held by the President's supporters, it was however insisted, and successfully, that "a bond must be taken of fate" itself, as one speaker stated it; and that, as a law for abolition passed by one Congress might be repealed by another Congress, the destruction of so powerful an institution as American slavery must rest on nothing less substantial than the National Constitution. Then, if we should, at any future date, go out of power in the mutation of parties, nothing less than two-thirds of both branches of Congress with three-quarters of all the States concurring, could, in any way, unsettle our work.

Senator Sumner was one of the earliest, after this was decided, to indicate the language he desired to have placed in the Constitution, thus:

Everywhere within the limits of the United States, and of each State or Territory thereof, all persons are equal before the law, so that no person can hold another as a slave.

And I must incorporate here a very few sentences from his masterly oration on the subject, as illustrating, better than any words of another, his position on this momentous question. Said he: By a single brief sentence Congress may sweep slavery out of existence. But, even under the most favorable circumstances, it is impossible to say when the amendment can become a part of the Constitution. Too tardily, I fear, for all the good is sought. Therefore, I am not content with this measure alone. It postpones till to-morrow what ought to be done to-day!

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, To the last syllable of recorded time.

Ah, sir, it would be a glad sight to see that Constitution which we have all sworn to support, interpreted generously, nobly, gloriously for freedom, so that, everywhere within its influence, the chains should drop from the slave. Whatever may be the judgment of the Senate, I am consoled by the thought that the most homely text containing such a rule will be more beautiful far than any words of poetry or eloquence; and that it will endure to be read with gratitude when the rising dome of the Capitol, with the statue of Liberty which surmounts it, has crumbled into dust.

Congress, however, preferred a different phraseology from that suggested by Mr. Sumner, so that the 13th Amendment now stands in the Constitution in the following language: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction."

Its passage in the Senate was easily achieved. On the 8th of April, 1864, that body adopted it by the overwhelming vote of 33 to 6 (Garrett, Davis, Hendricks, McDougal, Powell, Riddle, Sanbury voting No). But it encountered more determined and dangerous opposition in the House of Representatives. Two months afterwards, in June, on the question of its passage there, the yeas were 95, and the nays 68, considerably less than a two-thirds vote, and it was therefore declared by the Speaker to be rejected.

Fortunately, however, Mr. Ashley, of Ohio, just before the result was announced, changed his vote from the affirmative to the negative. And subsequently, when other business was pending, he entered a motion to reconsider. A volley of points of order from the pro-slavery members followed, but in vain. He had "voted on the prevailing side," and was therefore entitled to move a reconsideration; and the motion, having been received when other business was before the House, could not be acted upon at the time. It therefore "went over" till such time as the majority of the House should see fit to call it up for action. That did not occur, of course, at that session; and fortunately again, there was another session of the same Congress yet to be held.

Before that session convened in December, 1864, the Presidential election of that year had been held. Mr. Lincoln had been re-elected overwhelmingly. The people had spoken mightily. Sherman had marched to the sea gloriously. The overthrow of the Rebellion was beyond all question. And on the 31st of January, 1865, the same House which had rejected the amendment passed it by 119 to 58 (7 votes over two-thirds). Abraham Lincoln affixed his signature to it Feb. 1; although protesting to the enrolling committee that it was needless, as the Constitution authorized "two-thirds of Congress" to submit amendments to the States. The President's own State of Illinois delighted him by a telegram that very night, that it had, first of all others, ratified this great amendment. Rhode Island and Michigan won the next place of honor by ratifying it the following day. But months elapsed before the requisite number was obtained.

Finally, on the 18th of December, 1865, Secretary Seward issued the official proclamation that twenty-seven States, being just three-fourths of the entire number of thirty-six States, had ratified it, and that it had therefore become a part of the Constitution. It is worthy of note that Georgia was the twenty-seventh State, its ratification occurring December 6; and that five States afterwards ratified it—Oregon, Florida, New Jersey and Iowa, the last one on January 24, 1866.

At last the glad word was spoken by the nation, and thenceforward in our land "the sun could not rise on a master nor set on a slave." I cannot conclude without a brief allusion to a few who can never be forgotten when the past rises before my vision.

First, as entitled to precedence among the Congressional opponents of slavery in the day of its power, were the veterans, JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, JOSHUA R. GIDDINGS and OWEN LOVEJOY, who spoke so faithfully for freedom in the earlier years, fearless of obloquy or terrorism—"who waited long, but died without the sight."

Next I see that trio of illustrious Senators who had aided so effectively in this grand work, but who so soon followed our first martyred President to the tomb—COLLIER, FOOT and FESSENDEN—Collamer, encyclopedia in varied knowledge and unsurpassed in logical reasoning; Foot, whose commanding presence and parliamentary ability made him one of the most popular of presiding officers; and Fessenden, of whom it was said so poetically at his funeral, "His words were swift and sharp as a cimeter; they warmed as the Olympic wheel caught fire in the swiftness of the race."

And surely two of the other House, whose votes "proclaimed liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof," will stand most eminently conspicuous in history—HENRY WINTER DAVIS of the former slave State of Maryland, one of the most gifted and graceful orators our nation has ever produced, and THADDEUS STEVENS, a born leader amongst men for such a crisis, grim in satire, scathing in invective, fearless and frank, who asked that his only obituary should be that "he was who had striven to ameliorate the condition of the poor, the lowly and the down-trodden, of every race and language and color."

With many more, to whom the Republic owes so much, they have passed away; but their work will live after them while time shall last, and our regenerated nation shall endure.

EX-SENATOR McDONALD.

His Views on the Chinese and Foreign Immigration.

Ex-Senator McDonald, who was interviewed at Indianapolis, on the 24th, with respect to Know-Nothingism, he having expressed the belief that the immigration of foreigners was what American labor had to fear more than anything else, said: "I am in favor of the exclusion of the Chinese, because I do not want our people to have to compete in wages with people who can subsist on one-fourth the cost that is required for a workman. I want all who do not come to this country for the purpose of becoming citizens of this nation, and making for themselves and families homes here, to be excluded from the privileges of coming here and accumulating means to build houses in some other country. I do not want the American workman brought down to their level. I am not opposed to immigration of persons who come here and become citizens, because then they will become factors of the Government and nation, and be entitled to certain rights as factors. We cannot legislate for individuals, but it must be for a general class or on general principles. I am in favor of the Chinese bill, and was in favor of it when it was before Congress. That bill expresses my views exactly." He declined to be interviewed on the political probability farther than to state that he was for a Democratic nominee, who he was quite sure would be elected. He was of the opinion that the tariff question would constitute the leading issue in the next Presidential campaign.

A Proposed Permanent Exhibition at New York.

A number of capitalists of New York city propose to organize a permanent exhibition. One of the managers says: "The exhibition will be permanent and on other respects very much like the Centennial at Philadelphia. We expect to occupy forty acres of ground and will put up an agricultural building, a machinery building, a horticultural building and art and science buildings, including a mammoth concert hall and possibly, in time, a theater. These will be open to the public at all times, excepting through the winter months, and a nominal admission will entitle visitors to the privileges of the entire exhibition. The departments will be open to exhibits from all parts of the world, so that, in fact, the scheme is nothing less than a world's fair and a permanent one at that."

The friends of Senator Rollins at Washington, who have been in constant private communication with him, abandoned all expectations of electing him, are now chiefly concerned as to what effect the success of the "Bollers" will have upon a Presidential canvass in New Hampshire next year. It is thought the present rupture in the party can be entirely healed by next year, but many Republicans will become disgusted with the situation that they will then stay away from the polls. If this should happen New Hampshire will be lost to the Republican Presidential column next year.
